"CLEAR THE WAY."

The city lies in hushed repose,
The wintry night wind freshly blows.
As if to rock the cradle host
In slumber's sweet oblivion lost.
But hark: a sound, and lo! a sight
That wakes the town in dead of night.
A shrick and a giare,
A cry of despair,
At the flames in their ire,
For the one word is "Fire!"
The people rush out,
And, with hurry and shout,
Press on to the light
As it brightens the night,

As it brightens the night,
And spreads like a banner unfurled up on high,
A sign and a terror against the dark sky!
But hark to the clatter, than music more sweet
Of the rolling wheels and the horses' feet!
"Out of the way—out of the way!
They come to save—now clear the way."

A sea of faces upward turned,
One fear by every heart inurned;
By ruddy light is clearly read
On every brow the anxious dread.
A mother 'mid the bright light stands,
Her neck tight clasped by baby hands,
And through roar and hiss,
Not quite they miss
Her piteous frenzied cry;
But mounting quick on high
A hero springs,

A hero springs, His helm a star

"You seldom see an advertisement for a book agent in these days," remarked a veteran canvasser, "but that doesn't signify that the much abused man is no longer seen abroad in the land. There is a certain stigma attached to the business, and a man is deterred from becoming a book agent for the same reason that and a man is deterred from becoming a book agent for the same reason that prompts a woman to do anything rather than go out to service. The houses that deal in subscription books are well aware of this feeling, and unscrupulous publish-ers resort to the most ingenious plans to word their advertisements so as to con-ceal the real nature of their business. If they made a direct call for book agents they would receive very few applicants, but by couching their advertisements in ambiguous and alluring language they are sure to get the pick of the unemployed men and women. Their main object is to men and women. Their main object is to get the people to call, for it is then easy enough to induce the most likely to try their luck by holding out flattering promises. The scheme most usually employed is to advertise for collectors at a fixed salary. When a man calls and proves satis-factory he is told that he can have the job as soon as it is ready, being made to be-lieve that he is to have a new route as soon as the canvassers have drummed up enough subscribers. "In the meantime the man is advised to do a little canvassing himself. He will be able to make living wages and familiarize himself with the business. The man is, of course, a little disappointed, but at last consents to become a book agent for the time being in anticipation of getting a place as collector at a fixed salary. An iron bound contract is then drawn up, for the sake of formality, he is told, by which he agrees to sell the book on commission. He is then required to deposit $10 as security for the dummy copy he is to carry with him. Time passes, and the route on which he was to serve as collector is as far from completed as ever. He has found that canvassing is hard work and doesn't pay his board. He gets discouraged, turns in his dummy copy and demands the return of the deposit he paid on it. The firm refuses to return the money, and point to the clause in the agreement that refers to breach of contract. The firm has the law on its side, and the man has no redress. The cost of manufacturing these dummy copies is not one-tenth of the security demanded, and many firms pay their running expenses with the money received as deposits."—New York Evening Sun.

In Havana's Eating Houses

The cafes of Havana are as bright and winsome as those of Paris, but are more attractive at all seasons of the year, for the climate allows of a greater openness to the street. This is taken advantage of in all little ways of decoration and arrangement that stand for invitation and welcome. Some of them are very grand affairs, but all possess an atmosphere of snugness and daintiness that is delicious. Indeed, it must be set down to the credit of all these people that the delicate refine-ments of life are inherent. Courtesy, politeness, consideration, or at least the surface use of it, are universal. They are an artistic people in the environment of little things, though themselves unconscious of that national characteristic; and both facts are delightful to one who tarries with them.

These cafes and fondas (or eating houses, for the latter are equally resorted are almost a part of it, as frequently more than one-half the cafe is underneath long, wide, huge pillared porticos. Here chattering crowds by day and brilliant crowds by night, under the flare of lamps in great century old metal frames, never cease cigarette smoking, gin and wine drinking, although all liquors, however frequently ordered, are used in sparing quantities. And between the shrill cry of the dulceros, or confection peddlers, the hoarse impor-tunities of the lottery ticket mobs, the ever minor music of the wandering street minstrels and the marvelously gay but never brutal and more than half Oriental city life, the "click, click, click" of the universal and never silent dominoes upon the marble tables come to you as an undertone staccato of myriads of unseen castanets.—Edgar L. Wakeman's Letter.

Origin of the Blizzard.

Where is its cradle, its home? The Arctic regions. The papers talk about a blizzard having started from Manitoba, but that is not its home-its starting point. Manitoba is only its half

Why do blizzards come by way of Manitoba, and make themselves most felt upon the west side of the Mississippi river? Why do we never hear of blizzards in Canada, New England and the middle states?

Because the Laurentian range of mountains stretches westward from Labrador along the southern line of British America 3,000 miles, skirting the north shore of Lake Superior, and tapering out in northeastern Minnesota, furnishing a protecting wall of solid rock 4,000 feet high against blizzards for all the region south of it. Geologists tell us that this range is formed of the oldest silurian or sedimentary rock to be found upon the globe, and that it extends 30,000 feet below the surface. From northeastern Minnesota to the Rocky mountains is an open, treeless plateau—a great doorway 1,000 miles wide—through which the ice king rushes. From that line southward is, in the main, the same treeless prairie all the way to the Gulf of Mexico, forming west of the Mississippi river the royal toboggan slide, 3,000 miles long, upon which his ice crowned majesty, the blizzard, sweeps in all his jeweled robes to swoon in the arms of the tropical sun. The Texas norther is only the frayed fringes of the blizzard king's mantle as he whirls past.

The Sewers of Paris.

The idea of keeping the sewers clean had not thoroughly penetrated the minds of the engineers early in the century, and in none of the smaller ones was it possible to stand erect. Many were built too near the surface, and it was sometimes necessary to climb a ladder to get into them. In every case they were of solid masonry. Until quite lately the Paris sewers were built entirely of cut stone or partly of cut stone and partly of a soft, excessively porous stone called meuliere. It is intended in future to build entirely of meuliere. The manner of using it is this: A great trench is dug, in which a wooden frame is placed, the size and shape of the desired sewer. The meuliere is placed about this frame and a concrete made of a concrete made of the bes cement is applied in such a man-ner as to fill solidly all the cavities of the stone and make a durable wall impervious to moisture. The frame is removed and the trench filled up as soon as the concrete is sufficiently hardened.—Paris Cor. San Francisco Chronicla.

English Interest in American Tariff. While men who are seeking to break down the protective policy in the Unit-ed States are destined to encounter opposition and ultimate defeat, they are not without the encouragement of good words and hearty support from the English press and politicians. The peans of approval of the president's late message were somewhat hushed by the warning of the Pall Mall Gazette to moderate the eestacy of their jubilation, as every word spoken in com-mendation of the message would be used as a powerful argument against the adoption of its recommendations." But repression was no longer possible when the terms of the St. Louis platform and the renomination of Mr. Cleveland were made known.

The mere fact of this foreign ecstacy is suggestive; but when we come to read the terms in which it finds expression and the reasons given for its existence, patriotic indignation is well-nigh overwhelmed in amazement at British arrogance and the truculence of its American abettors.

Referring to the shouts of the St. conis convention and its waving of red handkerchiefs woven on British looms, the London Star said, "We may very well re-echo that enthusiasm on this side of the water, for the re-election of President Cleveland means the adoption of his programme of tariff revision, and his ideas on that subject go a long way towards freetrade.'

And why this enthusiasm over the prospect of freetrade? Here is the answer given by the London Economist: 'On the adoption of freetrade by the United States depends the greater share of English prosperity for a good many years to come." And the Brilish Hosiery Review reiterates: "We venture to assert that England will reap the largest share of any advantages that may arise from the adoption of the ideas now advocated by the freetrade party in the United States.' During the recent session of the English labor convention, it was asserted, without contradiction, that England has 700,000 workmen out of employment, and numerous mills and workshops closed or working on short time. It was further asserted that relief from this unfortunate condition could be secured in but one of two ways: First, assisted emigration; second, reduction of the United States tariff so as to se-cure free admission of British manufactures-a privilege now refused even by England's own colonies.

Neither of the alternatives here presented are likely to find many sympathizers among American workmen, who are now called upon to decide between the English policy of freetrade and the low wages it entails, and that policy of fostering home industries, by which our country has attained her present enviable prominence among the nations of the earth.

The Verdict Unanimous. W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testi-fies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, drug-gist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters. Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood.
